A Newsletter for FPI Testers

November 2014

Why Did You Change the Login Process?

This is a great question, and it's one we get asked frequently. In the past a link in your email took you directly to your available tests. Now the link takes you to our homepage and you need to log in to see your available tests. What a hassle, right?

We understand, and we wouldn't ask this of you if it wasn't important. It's all about your security and privacy. In order to show you tests that you are likely to qualify for, we access your personal information including your age, gender, income and address, among other things.

While requiring you to login, we have tried to make it as simple as possible. You no longer need to remember your FPI Personal Identification Number (PID) and 4 digit PIN. All you need to remember is your email address and a password of your choosing. We understand that it's a little more work, but we hope you'll agree that it's worth it!

Diversity...

We live in a very vibrant and ethnically diverse metro area. Our clients want our tests to reflect that diversity as much as possible. We often have quotas for various ethnicities and we will notify you when tests come up with a specific quota for your ethnicity. Please take a moment to fill in this field on your profile page. We currently have many tests which have quotas for various ethnic groups.

Here is a GREAT Tip!

When you log in to see your available tests please allow up to a full minute for these tests to load. The same goes for available sessions, once you qualify.

And don't forget...when you log in to the website get into the habit of checking your Session Selector first. Why? Because things change! If you qualified for a test but there were no openings that worked for you, there may be new openings the next time you log in.

Thank You!

In this season of thanksgiving, we want to thank all of our wonderful testers...for being patient in our time of transition to our new system, and for all of your help in filling so many tests in October and November! We are thankful for all of you, and wish you all a very Happy Thanksgiving!
